When your newly born baby arrives you want to ensure that, everything is just right from the room layout, decor, colours and comfort to safety and security. You want to give yourself and the rest of your family complete peace of mind knowing that, your baby is in comfortable surroundings and you can monitor their every move and sound.

One of the best facilities for being able to keep a close eye on your baby without being in the same room as the baby, is to invest in one of the many excellent baby sensor monitors in the marketplace. These offer the parent many advantages over basic audio models and have many outstanding features.

What are the main types of baby sensor monitors?

1) Many models have movement pads which are directly placed under the baby's mattress and there is a superb alarm facility, which goes off if the baby has showed no signs of movement in 20 seconds and can be used in conjunction with an audio or video monitor.

Some models consist of a small device which can be clipped on to babyâ€™s nappy or clothing, and monitors babyâ€™s movements to ensure they are breathing correctly. Like the sensor pad models, these also sound an alarm after 20 seconds of no movement detected.

2) Baby sensor monitors are normally priced around Â£45 - Â£90 depending on what other features you are looking for in your product. If you want a basic model without all of the bells and whistles then, you would expect to pay the lower end price of the market and likewise if you wanted the model with various add-ons then, it would only be expected to pay the higher end price.

The number one aim for you and your baby should be their complete comfort and safety. This can easily be done in buying the right product to suit you and your family's needs and give you the control and peace of mind knowing that, all of your baby's needs are met and they are having a comfortable and pleasant sleeping experience.
