Car leasing may be a new concept for a lot of individuals. It is only normal to be very apprehensive when approaching a concept that is new and unfamiliar to you. If it is your first time to lease a car then it will be very helpful if you know what you are getting into.

When leasing a car, the choice of the car is entirely up to you. You get to choose the kind of car that you want to lease. So before you approach the leasing company, it is best to have a specific car in mind so that you know which deal to shop around for. It is also easier to compare prices from various leasing companies if you base the price on a specific car model. While making inquiries, you can just compare the prices for the different durations of the lease. You can ask for the cost of a 2-year lease and compare it to the cost of the 3-year lease.

When deciding on the length of the lease, it is best not to go beyond a 3-year lease. This is because the warranty for the car only covers a 3-year period. If you go beyond 3 years then you will not be protected by a warranty. A three-year old car will most likely experience some breakdowns since it is not a new car anymore. If your leased car breaks down and it is no longer under warranty then you have to pay for the cost of the repairs. Car repairs can be very costly especially when it requires the replacement of car parts.

Before you lease a car, it is also important to make a rough estimate of the number of miles that you will travel in 2 or 3 years depending on the length of lease that you prefer. This is important because leasing companies impose a limit on the number of miles that you are allowed to use the car for. If you go beyond the limit on the mileage then you have to pay additional charges when your lease contract ends. It is best to avoid these charges by making sure that you do not go beyond the limit on the mileage.

In car leasing, you must make it a point to shop around for the best price. Do not settle for the first leasing company that you come across. No matter how tempting their prices are, you will most likely come upon another leasing company that can offer an even better deal for you if you take the time to shop around first.
