

Article Side

If you believe in your literary work get it published without delay by Andrew

Article published on April 23rd 2012 | Book Marketing

Eddie is a young English undergraduate who loved to write from childhood. After he has completed his education he has the time to cultivate his childhood passion further. Two years into full time researching, writing and proofreading he has been able to complete a novel and it turned out to be one exceeding his expectation. It is about his school days with all its struggles and the marvels.

Eddie's immediate family as well as friends; whoever has listened to the novel or part of it has been extremely impressed and moved by the writing. Eddie even sent his novel to a few publishers for comments. However, six months have passed and he is yet to receive any positive feedback from any of them. He had some of the publishers asking for money to publish while some wanted to modify the content to a substantial amount to suit the taste of the readers. Eddie was agreeable to none of the propositions so he had to keep on waiting for the right opportunity for long.

Meanwhile, for inspiration he was going through the biographies of great authors online and he found some to have faced with rejections as high as fifty before they finally got their work in white and black. Some even had created a file to keep the regret letters from the publishers. This is true for writers of any genre be it poetry, novel or non-fiction.

While searching and researching on different information for writing Eddie embarked on the website called the 21 Black Street. Unusual as the name is, Eddie got interested to explore it more. And guess what he got everything he expected to self publish his literary work!

21 Black Street is a site which helped out African American Authors to publish their literary work instantaneously without any delay. The traditional publishing generally involves a time lag of six months to a year before the printed copies actually hit the shelves. But this is not the case while publishing with 21 Black Street.

It has no charges and does not impose writing sensibilities on the African American eBooks that get published through the web portal. It allows complete creative and artistic freedom to the authors. On the top of it, this site which publishes eBooks by Black Authors is very customer friendly and professional in approach.

The traditional publishing industry involves a number of middlemen and required to function in a team. There are not only several editors but the marketing assistants as well as other parties. The involvement of so many parties may be the source of potential error in the final output and also eats up the revenues.

Eddie can do away with these by choosing to self publish his novel with 21 Black Street for free. There will be no middle man and the percentage of receipt from the sale proceeds will be almost as high as 80% after deducting the PayPal charges.

21 Black Street is a web portal that offers great opportunity and a good initial platform to all the authors who want to publish African American eBooks and cater to the African American market. Eddie can also collaborate with his university pals to co create literary works.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/book-marketing-articles/if-you-believe-in-your-literary-work-get-it-published-without-delay.htm> - Article Side

Andrew - About Author:

21 Black Street is a portal which you, as one of the promising young a African American Authors, can use as a platform to get published. The site helps the authors publish a African American ebooks which are high quality a ebooks by Black Authors.

Article Keywords:

African American ebooks, African American Authors, Ebooks by Black authors

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!