Cotton Pareos from India â€“ a unique blend of fashion and style by Chris

Article published on March 12th 2012 | Shopping

Cotton pareos have been used across tropical countries in South Asia as essential beach wear. Comfortable and versatile, they can make your beach moments quite memorable. Throughout the world, pareos are made from pure cotton as well as other materials such rayon, viscose, silk and other blended fabrics. Interestingly, they are referred in many names such as lungi, malong, sarong, toga, mundum, etc.

There are many ways in which you can wear a sarong but the most common way of tying one is to simply wrapping it around your waist and folding the ends over the waist line to secure it firmly in place. That said a sarong can be worn as a bathing suit, a short or long dress or a scarf. On hot days, some people also wear them as turbans to protect themselves from the sun.

Cotton Pareos from India

In India, the cotton industry has always attracted lots of international traders. Their goods have always been designed and manufactured in such a way that once they are worn, they will make you look hot, trendy and amazing. Trend and design are not the only attributes of cotton pareos, high durability and long shelf life are also innate traits. Superior, fine quality fabrics made from the best fibers are stitched into crafting a pareo. The reason why Indian cotton is ideal for making one is because the fabric is comfortable, permeates air and sweat and is easily washable. The amazing finishing makes them a favorite choice of ladies.

Once you wear one a cotton pareo, you will turn into a stylish and spell casting personality. What makes these seemingly simple pieces of cloth so striking? It is the design and exquisite patterns that are printed on them which combine to give you that summery experience. Pareos are often printed with intricate tie-and-dye patterns in a multitude of colors. Animals, nature, flowers and abstract patterns are other designs which are often printed on them. Get one of these sarongs get that authentic "Hawaiian feeling". Cover less and make your presence felt with you hot flirty manifestations on beaches and swimming pools. Designer pareos can also be the perfect gift for your wife or your girlfriend on special occasions.

So if you live in or near a tropical country, don't ever forget to acquire a sarong. They can truly transform your personality on the beach into a fun loving and sexy person. Ensure that you have at least three of four pareos in multiple colours and with various designs.
