How to Ensure You Get the Best Home Phone Deal for Your Needs by Sue Johnson

Article published on December 29th 2011 | Technology

When considering deals from home phone line providers, it is important to have a clear idea of how you plan to use it. Most telecom companies tailor their deals to meet specific needs and it is well worth visiting a price comparison in order to get a better idea of what is out there, whether they fulfill your requirements and how much each package costs before you commit to a deal.

If you currently do not have a landline and are using your mobile phone to make all your calls, it is worth checking your bill against the prices offered by landline providers. With many companies offering free phone line installation, you could stand to save money with a landline if you only have a small free calls quota on your mobile phone contract.

For those who work from home, a deal that offers an 'anytime' price plan could be the best avenue to take. These packages allow peak time calls to be made at a similar rate of pay as off-peak. However, if you are often out during the day, it is worth disregarding deals that are based around 'anytime' tariffs, as you will not be able to reap the benefits of a price plan of this nature.

If you call mobile numbers more often than you call landlines, it is worth investigating the amount providers charge for these calls. While most mobile providers offer reduced rates to numbers on the same network, calling a mobile on a different network can sometimes prove costly. Many landline operators offer deals that feature reduced call costs to mobile phones, although most limit the amount of time you can spend on these calls before increasing the rate so when comparing deals, you should make a point of seeking out these rates and time scales.

Those looking to change providers should consult a recent bill and compare the prices they are charged by their current provider with the rates offered by other companies. If other providers offer cheaper call charges or monthly line rental, it may be worth contacting your current provider to see if they have a different price plan they can move you onto, or if they can offer you any discounted rates that were not available when you signed up with them. Many providers are extremely keen to retain your custom and will often offer favourable deals to keep you on their books. There is no sense in switching to another provider without first contacting your current supplier.

When you have taken into account your needs and the times you are most likely to use a landline, you should visit a price comparison website such as www.homephonechoices.co.uk. Often independently run, these sites offer impartial advice and allow bespoke searches, so you can compare deals that only fall within your budget.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/technology-articles/how-to-ensure-you-get-the-best-home-phone-deal-for-your-needs.htm - Article Side

Sue Johnson - About Author:
If you are looking for a a cheap landline deal, visit Homephone Choices. As well as offering a free price comparison service, you can also find out which providers offer a free phone line installation, who has the cheapest call charges and much, much more.

Article Keywords:

cheap landline, free phone line

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!