Whether you are building a new staircase or are planning to remodel an existing one, buying a new set of stair treads is always an important decision. There are plenty of options available in the market today and if you are not sure about what exactly you are looking for, you could easily feel a little confused. Most sellers of stair parts and other related accessories would offer you a range of stair tread to choose from. From marble steps to those made of wood to a more innovative kind of stair tread that makes use of a host of other unconventional materials (such as steel or toughened glass) â€“ the choices are many indeed. However, while you are likely to find most of them quite attractive, do not let aesthetics be your only guiding factor while buying a stair tread.

Buying stair parts should always be accompanied by concerns over beauty, safety and functionality. And stair treads are no exception. The steps of a staircase form an important part of the entire stairway. While it is natural to wish for beautiful looking steps in the house, you should also ensure that they are safe to use and offer a good footing.

One rule of thumb when choosing stair treads to ensure maximum safety is to opt for treads that are the widest. A wider step means a better footing and less slipping. In other words, there is just one major question that needs to be asked â€“ whether to install treads measuring 2 x 12 or 3 x 12? If you let safety issues guide your decision, the choice is very simple â€“ 3 x 12.

These days, you can even buy prefinished stair treads that are available in a wide range of colors and polishes to match the existing dÃ©cor of your home. Just take them out of their packaging and have them installed instantly. Unlike conventional stair treads, installing prefinished stair treads involves no long delays and the entire staircase can be made ready for use within just a few hours. These days prefinished stair treads are made as per very high quality standards. As a result; you can expect to enjoy trouble-free service for years without the need to polish them again. If you are in a hurry to complete your stair remodeling project, these treads are ideal for you.

So, make up your mind today and start shopping for quality stair parts. Give a new look to your staircase and transform your surroundings like magic!
