Automatic Teller Machines or ATM Machine as it is popularly known was first introduced in 1939 by Luther Simjian. This machine was just the mere a concept of ATM Machine or bank in the whole as it is called. With much evolution taking in between the first American atm machinesATM Machine was introduced by a gentlemanperson called Don Wetzel. This was the first time a bank customer could start using the machine for banking transaction from any where in the world. While operating a ATM Machine certain steps are to be followed to handle proper transaction by the machine.

FirstFirst, an ATM card which has been allocated by the bank is to be inserted in the thin slot of the machine with the faciafascia on the upper side. Once this has been rightly done the machine will display on the screen of it â€œenter PIN numberâ€•. The Pin Number is a customer specific number and a secret number allocated by the bank to each customer which is distinctive in nature. Once you have fed the ATM Machines the right number, the machine will show on the screen the Menu options. In case you enter wrong PIN number the machine will show â€œverify PIN Numberâ€• and if you enter wrong PIN Number thrice in a row the transaction will be aborted by the machine. However if you put the right PIN Number, as mentioned earlier the Menu with various options will be displayed on the screen which normally include withdrawal, deposit, balance transfer and statement.

In case you decide to withdraw money you have to press the button below that display which would display on the screen savings and current which means the atm machinesATM machine requires the information as to from which account you would like to withdraw the moneyMoney.

Once you press the button of the desired link, the machine would request you to put the quantum of money required and the desired denomination. In case you do not have the requisite amount in the bank, the screen would flash insufficient fund where upon you check the available balance again and revise the requisition accordingly.Onceaccordingly. Once the money is available with you can check with the with the withdrawal slip which would come out of the machine to show how much money has been withdrawn and what is the balance left with the account.
