Delhi is one of the four metropolitan cities and indeed, it is the capital of India. You can come across a plenty of entities that have lived to tell the tale of Delhiâ€™s glory. You may have comprehended by now what we are referring to. Yes, you are right! We take a deep sense of pride when we throw some light on the history of this splendid city that has still been inherited from one generation to another.

Some may hold a different notion altogether when they are asked about the glory of Delhi with respect to its culture and traditions that have been persisting for a matchless amount of time. The city of Delhi has been first under the influence of Mughals when the first Mughal emperor Babar ruled over Delhi for a considerable number of years. Then began the reign of the emperors who dominated the throne one after the another as they gradually started ruling over Delhi.

When the Mughal Emperors were no more in power, the walls of Delhi were captured by the British who ruled over India for almost 200 years consecutively. You can surely feel the vibe when you visit different buildings and other places that have been erected by the Mughals and the British. Delhi has been divided into two parts which are Old Delhi and New Delhi. The credit goes to the emperors under whose influence the Old Delhi was created. You can visit the Jama Masjid, which is supposedly Asiaâ€™s largest Mosque. It was constructed by Shah Jahan who also built Taj Mahal in the loving memory of his beloved wife, Mumtaz Mahal. If you want to get the finest deals on cheap flights to Delhi, you can come in contact with travel agencies that work out the best deal for you suitable to your pocket.

There are the Mughal Emperors who when they were in authority got several forts constructed. It has been so many years since they left for their heavenly abode but they left behind a trail of all those palatial forts and monuments that are to be preserved. This is due to the fact that all the forts and historical monuments depict our rich heritage that has been on its crucial survival since the bygone era. You can avail good Delhi flights that donâ€™t burn a hole in your pocket.

You can pay a visit to various places such as Chandni Chowk, Iskcon Temple, India Gate, Akshardham Temple, Red Fort, Qutub Minar and the list is endless.
