Adhesive Tapes- Always keep them handy by James Blee

Article published on April 17th 2012 | Business

In everyday life we use tapes to wrap things up or stick them together. Considered as a household article adhesive tape are used for different crafting needs as well. Available in different types, colors and sizes these tapes have multiple usages and consists of a pressure sensitive sticker normally coated on a backing material. The water activated stickers are used for joining corrugated boxes. The heated activated stickers are tack free until they are activated using a heat source and are used for packaging cigarettes. The drywall ones are made of paper, cloth or mesh and used for making joints between sheets of drywall materials.

In the construction industry these tapes are placed along the edge of the conservatory roofing sheets to prevent the dust from entering. Durable and reliable these tapes hold well onto their surfaces and are easy to use. Whether you need to prepare a pack for birthday present or glue sheets of an old book together these tapes would be an ideal choice. These tapes can even be used to prevent the floor scratches while the chair is dragged by attaching them to the chairâ€™s feet..

These tapes also have a varied use for household purposes. They can be wrapped around the hand to lift lint and pet hair off the upholstery instead of a lint remover. These tapes can be used to remove the gunk deposited in between the comb teeth by applying it along the combâ€™s length and then peeling it off. By wrapping the furniture castor wheels with these tapes you can prevent your wood or vinyl flooring from getting scratchy marks. In order to remove the broken window glass you can crisscross both sides of the window pane with adhesive tape to prevent the sharp shard.
