The Right Length of Visit to Any Kenya Safari by Baron Miller

Article published on August 1st 2012 | Travel

There are many great holidays to Kenya; one can combine a Kenya safari with a beach holiday to make the perfect holiday choice. Alternatively, the adventurous may opt for only a Kenya safari holiday adventure due to a lack of time or finances.

Safari offering

Holiday makers who are adventurous would like a Kenya safari holiday where they can view some great wildlife that is seldom seen in real life. One can get close up with some of the wildlife in a Kenya safari to feel the adrenalin pumping while being safe in the 4-wheel drive with a guide and experienced driver.

There are many natural wildlife reserves in Kenya which are closely monitored by the Kenya authorities although these may be operated by private corporations. A Kenya safari allows one to enjoy the best of fauna and flora with some species that are unique only to Kenya. Holiday makers are able to set their own holiday pace with their own itinerary. This is especially useful when holiday makers do not want to be rushed into one activity from another.

A Kenya safari holiday is meant to be exciting and safe at a leisure pace to fully absorb all its offerings. The many species of wildlife would thrill any visitor as these are at ease in their own homeland. The wildlife roams and preys freely which is a great sight to behold.

Itinerary lengths

A Kenya safari can be enjoyed with a short visit of 3-4 days although many Kenya safari operators and authorities would not recommend it unless the tourists are really rushing for time or on transit in their journey. This short itinerary would allow the sighting of one or two wildlife viewings as some safari spots can be some distance apart. There would be a need to travel from the airport and hotel to the preferred Kenya safari.

The long distance would tire most tourists; hence, a time of refreshing is usually preferred before one gets onto the actual Kenya safari viewing. Moreover, a good game viewing is not guaranteed. There are many factors that impact a good game viewing; the weather, the time of viewing, the season and the Kenya safari location.

Hence, most Kenya safari operators or tour agencies would recommend a full length Kenya safari itinerary of at least 7 days. The ideal Kenya safari itinerary would be 9 to 12 days where more beautiful Kenya safari offerings can be discovered at leisure.
