Analgesics maintained its positive development in 2011, with most categories showing robust growth in volume and current value terms. This performance was underpinned by the strong tendency of Bolivians to self-medicate for minor ailments such as headaches, joint and muscle pain and cough, cold and flu symptoms. This tendency is partly due to the fact that most Bolivians live on low incomes and cannot afford to visit the doctor for such minor complaints. At the same time, busier lifestyles mean...
