Flexible ducting is a commonly used product in many sectors and is widely used in ventilation systems in office buildings or other commercial premises. There are many different kinds of flexible ducting available to buyers but whichever type of flexible ducting customers go for, they need to ensure that it is going to be durable and do the job well.

Some flexible ducting is uninsulated and other types are insulated, or made from acoustic aluminium. Those looking for flexible ducting could also opt for semi rigid aluminium flexible ducting, and before investing buyers should make sure that they are getting the flexible ducting which is going to be most suitable for their needs.

Here at HAS we specialise in flexible ducting and our online store stocks a comprehensive range of flexible ducting and other ventilation products. We are the UKâ€™s leading supplier of all kinds of ductwork and flexible ducting, and we have a national network of branches as well as an online presence.

Many of our flexible ducting customers come to us for insulated flexible ducting, and we stock Hasflex aluminium insulated flexible ducting which has been made from reinforced materials and polyester laminate, as well as high tensile steel wire helix for brilliant performance.

We sell this flexible ducting in a huge range of sizes, from boxes of 80 10 metre lengths to packages containing hundreds of pieces of flexible ducting, and this gives our customers the chance to ensure that they are only buying the exact amount of flexible ducting they need for their premises.

One of the most important considerations when it comes to buying flexible ducting is safety, and any flexible ducting bought to use in a ventilation system should adhere to the relevant health and safety standards. As well as this, flexible ducting needs to be in keeping with fire safety rules, to ensure that in the event of a blaze, flexible ducting does not result in more issues.

If you are looking for flexible ducting then visit us here at HAS and browse through our range. Our website shows many of our products but for information about all of the flexible ducting we stock, give us a call and speak to our knowledgeable team.
