Auto Detailing Vs. Washing - Why the Difference is Important by Jackson Thompson

Article published on June 27th 2012 | Business

Regular maintenance and checkups are essential to keeping your car in good condition and avoiding costly repairs. Car detailing and washing should both be a part of your maintenance routine, but it's important to know the difference between the two in order to understand why both are necessary. However, detailing is a much more complex and time-consuming procedure that can help you protect your car from damage while a car wash will simply improve the way your car looks. You can find many affordable auto detailing options in the Toronto area, and the benefits the process profiles are well worth the price of the service.

One of the biggest differences between auto detailing and washing is the amount of work involved. Car washing is relatively quick. The purpose of a car wash is to improve the appearance of your vehicle. It can be done by professionals or on your own in your driveway. Car detailing, on the other hand, is done by experienced auto detailers with the goal of improving your car's performance and protecting it from future damage. Unlike car washing that is strictly about cosmetic improvements, detailing is aimed at preventing damages and helping you maintain your car in great shape.

Detailing involves checking the engine and the interior of the car for signs of wear and tear. The process can help you spot minor repairs that need to be fixed. Taking care of minor problems is the best way to prevent them from growing into potentially expensive repairs in the future. In addition to a thorough inspection of your car, auto detailing also involves a number of maintenance services that are not covered by a car wash. Depending on the Toronto auto detailing service you choose, your car might be sprayed, conditioned, degreased and dried with compressed air in addition to being cleaned. The conditioning typically involves using a special conditioner that is applied to the interior of your car in order to keep it clean and protect it from sun damage.

The reason why auto detailing is more expensive than car washing is because it involves a lot more than cleaning your car's exterior. It also requires a lot more time and expertise than a car wash that you can do on your own in a few minutes. Car detailers take pride in their work, and they know how to keep a car in the best possible shape. Although car detailing doesn't need to be done as often as car washing, it needs to be a part of your maintenance routine if you want to keep your car's performance smooth and protect it from potentially expensive damages in the future.
