Article published on January 20th 2012 | Business

Business is a complicated field, and Business Litigation is no exception to the rule. When you find yourself involved in a business or commercial disagreement, it is a difficult time, and one that can be extremely stressful for all involved. Fortunately, there are business litigation lawyers that are the specialists to fight on your behalf and help you to receive the maximum award possible, whether through settlement, or judgment.

What Types of Cases Require a Ohio Business Law Lawyer?

There are many different types of cases that require the services of a business litigation lawyer. Following are some areas that you will find the business litigation lawyer represents.

Business litigation

Breach of contract

Fraud

Stock market loss issues, including unsuitable advice, misconduct and misrepresentation

Qui tam law, whistleblower, and fraud

Insurance disputes and bad faith claims

Class action lawsuits, such as those that involve lender fraud and securities fraud

These are all issues that a business litigation lawyer will have experience in handling.

How to Find a Cleveland Lawyer

When you decide that you need a business litigation lawyer, you will have many choices as to where to find a lawyer. You might find that your accountant refers you to a lawyer, or friends or family. You might also look on the Internet, which is a great source, and one that provides plenty of information about the lawyers. There is also the good old fashioned Yellow Pages.

At your initial consultation you will have the opportunity to present your documentation and discuss your case. This is a extremely important meeting and one that you should be fully prepared for. During your initial consultation, the business litigation lawyer will let you know your chances of success.

The Cost to Obtain a Business Litigation Lawyer

The cost will vary from lawyer to lawyer; however, you will find that most lawyers charge right around $250 an hour. The recommendation is definitely t hire a lawyer that works on a contingency fee basis. A contingency fee basis is an agreement that you will not be responsible for attorney fees unless there is a settlement or judgment in your favor. This is a great way to ensure that you have a lawyer that works to get you the maximum award and that you do not waste money on a case that may be lost in court.

What Should I Look for in a Business Litigation Lawyer?

When you look for a business litigation lawyer, you definitely want to look for a lawyer that has the experience representing clients in cases similar to yours. It is important that you hire a lawyer that has the credentials and qualifications and experience to represent you. A reputable lawyer with the skills, knowledge and experience in business law is essential and should be one that you set as a priority.

While business and commercial disagreements can be troublesome, there are business litigation lawyers to represent you and ensure that the situation is handled properly and that you have the best opportunity of receiving compensation.
