Carpets: Conquering the Floors by Julia Roger

Article published on June 28th 2012 | Business

A Carpet is a floor covering used to serve many purposes. Looking at the designs and colors it is assumed that they are used for aesthetic purpose only. Though it basically looks like that but it also has some utilities which are necessary.

The history of carpets dates back to the nomadic age when people made carpets to cover the mud floors. The Egyptians, Chinese and Mayans were using carpets from the early days. The basic concept of using the carpet for protection later metamorphosed into the present day carpet which has become a big industry. The earlier carpets were made using rich colors with natural shades. The designs were thematic and were very delicate. Making a carpet included the effort and time of many laborers and the carpets were hand woven. Now the carpet manufacturing industry has grown and synthetic materials are also used to make carpets. Instead of only hand woven, machine woven carpets are found more in the market. These are faster to make the costs less compared to the hand woven carpets.

In some places where there is extreme temperature, carpet is a necessity rather than luxury. In places where the temperature reaches extreme cold levels, the carpets provide a warm base for the foot and keep the building warmer. That is one of the best utilities of a carpet. The warmth a carpet produces depends on its thickness and the material used. The carpet sydney come in a wide range of pricing. Though the carpet Sydney is long lasting, maintenance plays an important role in deciding their life.

All the carpets need regular maintenance and cleaning for getting the best utility from them. There are carpet cleaning machines, which can be used to remove the dust from the carpet. The Persian carpets are in great demand for their richness in design, color and finishing.
