Familiarity often leads to the development of a certain degree of comfort. It may exist between two or more human beings, human beings and their pets, or even human beings and the products/services that they use. This comfort factor and its resultant familiarity can sometimes, also make it difficult to respond to change. Although people do tend to get cautious when approaching something different, it is usually due to the resultant uncertainties (whether perceived or otherwise). This phenomenon has also been found to be present among those who are familiar with personal or self storage facilities in Qatar.

The storage units commonly found at most commercial and personal storage solutions providers in Qatar, are collectively perceived as the universal storage unit of choice. In reality however, this may not always be true. They do have their advantages, and can prove to be a cost-effective solution for those one a tight-budget. But it is not a one-size fits all solution to every storage requirement. Environmental elements often play a significant role in the longevity of the goods kept in storage units. These include factors such as ambient temperatures, humidity, heat, dust, etc. Of these, humidity is considered to be the silent killer. The humidity factor involves the percentage of water vapour in the air. Higher the amount, greater is the risk to delicate items. Such items need special attention and care while putting them in storage, to ensure that they remain well preserved over time.

Items such as certain types of fabric and linen (especially those that are made of organic fibres), furniture, etc. can start to give out a damp, musty odour. This is often found to be the case, when they are stored in less than favourable conditions where heat and humidity levels are at sub-optimum levels. Warping may occur in wooden articles and artifacts, musical instruments and their ilk. Electronic items too are hyper-sensitive to spikes in temperature and moisture levels and their delicate circuitry may start to malfunction. The ageing process in the case of documents and photographs, especially the ones that are printed on untreated paper gets accelerated and they tend to yellow our prematurely.
