A major chunk of the business for storage solutions offered by various operators in the region came from individual users. In recent times, as the business climate has become increasingly competitive, firms have been looking to uncover new avenues for deriving cost efficiencies. Going down this path has led a few of them to look at commercial storage solutions a little more closely. Some of the key benefits that businesses could derive from renting a storage unit at a facility are as follows:

Warehouses and other conventional methods usually involve large tie-in periods, lengthy lease agreements and many other hindrances. Storage facilities on the other hand are quite flexible and open to shorter rental terms. Such agreements are particularly handy for businesses that have a fluctuating stock flow. The rental rates too are lower in comparison to those charged by office complexes. Some facilities even assist with stocking and can function as fulfillment centers.

Quality storage facilities usually tend to deploy stringent security measures designed to protect the customers goods at all times of the day or night. State-of-the-art surveillance systems, advanced access control logs, round-the-clock manned security personnel, etc. are some of the measures that one can find at such facilities.

Document archiving too can be shifted to a storage facility that has the setup required for the same. Firms get ready access to their documents, derive space benefits from freed up regular office premises and also get a secure document management solution in return.

Ease of access is another factor that works in favor of the storage service provider. Most facilities are usually located in easily accessible areas. While most have flexible hours of operation, there are a few that go on to offer their customers access to their units 24 hour access. This proves to be extremely convenient to businesses that service customers beyond conventional hours of operation. Thus they end up achieving significant gains as they no longer have to keep paying expensive rents for prime office space. Packaging materials too are usually available with operators for those that involve customer fulfillments.
