If you are thinking of building a modern kitchen for your home or you are considering renovation to give it a fresh and new look then you have lots of options in countertops and cabinets; they may also be designed in a way that they suit the modern dÃ©cor of it. There are lots of contemporary countertops available in the market which can be used in your kitchen and many of them can be used in the bathroom or your home bars. Let us now see what the options available to you are.

Granite countertops: Granite is a natural stone and it is sturdy too. It has huge application in contemporary and modern kitchen which considers quality no matter what the price is. It looks quite nice though with no design matching one another. These high price countertops are quite durable and one will last for generations without much of impact on the look.

Glass countertops: Glass countertops are widely used in modern kitchen especially where look is valued more than stability. It is less durable compared to granite but it can add stylish look to your kitchen and bathroom or wherever you use it. Glass bar countertops are seen in most of the bars that want to create a different look and wants lights to play a major role in the ambiance.

Quartz Countertops: When we talk about modern contemporary countertops we canâ€™t miss quartz. It is also known as engineered stone as it made and designed by men. It is as strong as granite and also has some additional features that may attract you.

Steel Countertops: While granite, glass and quartz look modern and appeals to normal people, steel is also not far behind. There are lots of kitchens where steep countertops are used and they make it look really great. It is easy on pockets but may not be suitable for every weather conditions.
