Not many of us ever try to look into the pangs of those mentally diseased people who are destined to lead there life confined within the closed walls of prisons. The National Alliance for The Mentally Ill, in one of its recent studies says that 16 percent of the prison population can be classified as severely mentally ill. In such circumstances, it becomes necessary to adopt some smart strategies of prison inmate management system so that the plight of these mentally ill inmates is addressed.

The correction management software system is one of the most innovative methods that has revolutionized the methodology of inmate manage system. It is nothing but a computerized case file management system used by the correctional service agencies, to manage the information on federal offenders throughout their period of sentence. The correction management software gathers, stores and retrieves information that can be helpful in tracking the offenders and in making decisions concerning their cases. Such software is a boon for the mentally ill offenders whose actions need constant monitoring for the proper jail management. A correction management software supplies accurate and timely information that can be shared through electronic means. It also provides effective integrative data base and case management data base in order to collect all offender related information for using and sharing necessary inputs which may be required for taking up effective correction majors and for making decisions for conditional release.

Inmate management system essentially is a mix of six key elements, which in combination, help in reducing a wide array of negative, destructive and dangerous inmate behavior. Jails that fully implement this kind of management system are expected to experience a safer, more secure, and more orderly environment.

If inmate behavior is managed effectively, jails can turn out to be a good working spot for staff, a safe and secured detention environment for the inmates and a highly valuable service for the community. Given the importance of proper inmate management system in achieving safety and security inside the jail premises, it may be viewed as one of the core functions of the jail authority and a subject matter of primary concern. The role of an efficient prison administrator is to consider all decisions regarding jail operations with respect to their respective impact on the inmate management system.

The absence of an effective jail management system is threat to the security of jail as it is the root cause of all the violence related problems.
