Esources Scam-More Reasons to Distrust It by Brad Smith

Article published on January 20th 2012 | Business

To efficiently focus on running your dropship business, you must first be aware of the real facts behind esources scam. The whole idea of the esources website being a scam is ridiculous because experienced resellers and wholesalers continue to recommend it as one of the most trusted resources for everyone involved in the dropship industry. Unlike most trade directories that simply list the details provided by wholesale companies, the esources portal verifies the legitimacy and reliability of each submission before the information goes online. This greatly helps filter out lots of fraudulent companies and scammers.

Why Do Scammers Target Trade Directories?

Trade directories like the esources portal have played major roles in preventing fraudulent companies from establishing themselves and swindling unsuspecting resellers. As a result, these scammers never miss an opportunity to strike back at the website. Usually, they do this by fabricating reports of an esources scam and spreading the report all over the web. However, experienced retailers never give any attention to these fake reports on esources scams because they are aware of the innumerable benefits that the trade directory offers.

The comprehensive and genuine information available on the site is invaluable for wholesalers and resellers alike. However, it is not easy to add business information on the esources website. All information you submit is thoroughly verified for legitimacy before it goes online. This process poses complications for fraudulent companies. To overcome this process without exposing their true identities, these scammers fabricate posts on an esources scam. However, that feeble attempt seems to have no effect on the popularity of the trade directory as it is still the trusted resource that connects retailers to reliable wholesalers.

More Visibility, More Sales, More Income

Getting listed in major trade directories makes your business visible to national and international wholesalers. The exposure your business will get from this website is incomparable. In fact, it is much more than you will ever be able to get through online advertisements. This excellent visibility helps you get the best deals in the industry and earn amazing income each month. When a simple listing with the esources portal offers so much for your business, it is best to ignore those reports on an esources scam and utilize the services provided by the website.

A paid listing with the esources trade directory is the most affordable means to reach out to potential business contacts based in different parts of the globe. This facility offers retailers the rare opportunity to source branded goods from different suppliers and thus present a huge collection of products for their customers. High-grade products and reliable shipping services help make your retailing business a favorite among customers. And, within a short time, you will be thrilled to note the volume of orders and profits that keep coming in.

So, as you can see, there is absolutely no truth in those reports on esources scam. The esources portal is still a unique resource that offers the perfect meeting place for resellers and wholesale companies.
