A property manager has many responsibilities toward the rented property and the tenant. As the property manager, you must provide a safe, habitable building with the appropriate amenities, such as water and heating, for a tenant. Whether you are renting residential or commercial property, you must ensure the tenants can use the property for their needs.

If the tenant fails to pay the rent on time, the property manager can inform the tenant of the late rent and try to make arrangements in obtaining the amount due. When a tenant ignores the property managementâ€™s attempts to obtain the rent that is past due, the property manager can officially evict the tenant from the property.

Evicting the tenant can be a delicate process, and the property manager needs to have the appropriate eviction notice forms that will explain to the tenant the reasons why they are being evicted and the number of days that the tenant has to leave the premises before legal action is taken. To ensure you are following local city and state laws for evicting a tenant, you can download free eviction notice forms for property managers from MyPropertyManager.

The free eviction notice forms for property managers allow you to enter the necessary information without having to create new documents for each different tenant based on the circumstances. You can obtain these forms by registering for a free account through the MyPropertyManager app. You can tailor the document with the necessary information regarding the property and the tenantâ€™s name who is receiving the eviction notice.
