Geriatric care is a specialized care provided to the elder and disable people. This job involves planning and administering right care for people who need help. Geriatric care managers work to help the troubled person and his family and to provide them social and health care services which help them become independent. Care managers in geriatrics enhance the life of persons by making sure that their all needs are fulfilled. They merge the psychological and physical care of people which results a healthy approach. There are a number of fields in geriatrics;

Geriatric nursing

Geriatric nursing is a field that involves the service of experienced nursing assistants, who assist the registered nurses in grooming, feeding, bathing and dressing of the person. Their main job is not to implement daily care of the person, but to manage medicines and treatments. Geriatric nursing is quite less demanding for the nurse, as most of the times the severity level of the person is much lower than several hospital inhabitants.

Geriatric social worker

The job of geriatric social worker can be stimulating and challenging working with senior citizens. The social workers in this area deal with the clients that are practicing schizophrenia, depression, memory issues and anxiety. These disorders of the client can be caused by health issues or due to the death of some dear one.

Geriatric social worker gets a bachelorâ€™s degree and then two years Masterâ€™s degree to achieve th MSW certificate. For this job, the education will provide a comprehensive knowledge about aging and mental approach such as patient care, medicine knowledge and communication skills. One can get a geriatric social worker job after getting BSW or MSW degrees. If you are a working in supported living facility, you have to get a Masterâ€™s degree in social work. For private practice, you should know that many health managers are on set incomes so it is imperative to get the NPI number and to apply to be a geriatric social worker.

Physical therapy jobs

Because of the high number of injuries and orthopedic surgeries, physical therapist geriatrics jobs in nursing facilities are required. Most of the hospitals often discharge their surgical patients and send them to specialized nursing faculties. Physical therapy is essential for the patient to heal from the orthopedic surgery. The geriatric physical therapist not only helps the orthopedic medical patients, but also treats the orthopedic surgery patient.

Some other geriatrics jobs for people with MSWs in geriatrics field include planning and administering the treatment procedures for senior citizens. People working in this field must have strong love for elders and should be competent to deal with the several issues, worries and moods of the clients. This field needs a mature and sympathetic person to do his job. In addition, this filed provides support to the elder people who donâ€™t have much support from family or relatives. The major goal of geriatric care manger is to help elderly to become comfortable with aging and live a healthier and improved lifestyle.
