This analysts forecast the Global Data Center Cooling Solutions (DCCS) market to grow at a CAGR of 11.5 percent over the period 2010â€“2014. One of the key factors contributing to this market growth is the need for additional cooling due to high-density computing in data centers. The Global DCCS market has also been witnessing increased use of precision cooling and economizer modes in data center cooling solutions across the globe. However, the increasing adoption of cloud computing is reducing the need for additional network devices and could pose a challenge to the growth of this market.
