

Article published on February 10th 2012 | Business

All businesses can benefit from its management receiving leadership training. A company may be more inclined to invest more in sales training but don't underestimate the importance of executive leadership training. The flow on effect from having managers and senior staff having proper Leadership skills is evident in better working relationships between staff members and management, more motivated and productive staff and a more positive working environment.

Personal Skills

Through attending leadership training managers will develop their own set of skills. Being able to handle difficult situations and becoming a good mediator is important for both big and small companies. Learning to be responsible for staff and decision making is a part of leadership training and managers will learn to accept challenges head on and look to different ways to come up with solutions. Learning to be a good leader will also reflect on other aspects of a managers job and help improve their general performance.

Communication

An important aspect of leadership training is learning good communication skills. To be a good leader you need to be able to communicate effectively with staff and interact in a way that is positive and beneficial to the growth of staff relations. Being taught that open lines of communication are necessary between staff and management is vital. Staff need to feel they can approach management about any problems as soon as they arise and that issues will be handled straight away. Being a good listener and being able to liaise with staff are leadership qualities that positively effect staff morale and subsequently increase productivity.

Other Benefits

Leadership training will bring out the best in the way a manager uses their time. Having good Time management skills is crucial in a workplace and these are skills that should be passed on to all staff members. Efficient staff are productive staff and an increase in business profits will be a direct reflection of this. At training seminars managers also have the opportunity to meet with people from other companies who they can share business ideas with and workshop their different methods of dealing with similar workplace issues. They may hear about new business techniques or the latest industry developments that are beneficial to their own company. Any sort of training helps increase motivation as developing a new set of skills boosts your confidence.

Leadership training is all about increasing motivation. Managers need to come away from training feeling excited about what they can offer their staff in terms of setting goals, boosting confidence and Productivity and having everyone pull together as a team. They need to pass on this motivation through being a good leader. Another benefit is that training is often tailored to specific industries so it will also help managers gain a better understanding of their company. Often seminars are run by professionals in the field and their advice and knowledge is invaluable, as well as the insights they have regarding industry advances, changing trends and developments in technology.

Amy Groot - About Author:

FranklinCovey is a global leader in effectiveness training, productivity tools a leadership, a productivity, a time management, a leadership training, a executive leadership training, strategy execution, and assessment services for organizations and individuals. FranklinCovey helps companies achieve greatness by unleashing the power of their work forces to focus and execute on top business priorities. Clients include multinationals, mid-sized and small, as well as numerous government entities and educational institutions. Organizations and individuals access FranklinCovey products and services through corporate training and consulting, licensed client facilitators, one-on-one coaching, public workshops and www.franklincovey.com.au/

Article Keywords:

leadership, productivity, time management,