How to Choose a Professional Electrician by Brad Jensen

Article published on February 17th 2012 | Business

Electrical accidents are one of the primary cause of death and serious injury to many Australians each year. According to the Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI), more than 30,000 non-fatal shock accidents occur each year. Moreover, accidental injury kills more than 2,000 children each and every day worldwide. Apart from human death and injury, electrical accidents can also destroy valuable goods and property. Most electrical/fire accidents are caused due to improper or poor wiring. Hence it is important to choose a professional electrician who can perform the electrical task effectively.

When you are looking for an electrical contractor, donâ€™t always choose the company with the cheapest quote, or try to cut costs. Remember, the safety of your family members and your property completely resides in the hands of the electrician. So, choose tactfully and patiently.

Some important tips that might assist you in finding the right electrician are listed below:

Look for references:

One way to identify a quality electrician is through references. Ask the company you are considering fot the job for a few references you can ring. The advantage in making use of references is that you will get unbiased information about the electrician from people who have used the services in the past.

Check out the electricianâ€™s expertise and certifications:

You need to get details about the electricianâ€™s experience and certifications, because these credentials determine his expertise in the electrical arena.

Examine his licenses:

Check out his license properly to ensure that he can perform the electrical work within your area without any legal problems.

Evaluate his public liability insurance:

This is one of the most important factors that must be checked properly because only a professional electrician will carry public liability insurance with him. You must also check the liability amount. It must be able to cover the value of your property. It is always important to check out the validity of the liability insurance because if it is not in place you could become liable for any problems that are caused during the electrical work.

Ask about his previous projects and clients:

When you ask with a reputed electrician about his previous projects, they should have no problem giving you examples of recent projects.

Check out his membership:

All certified and licensed electricians will be an active member in the electrician association around their area. If you are looking for a Perth electrician or electrical contractor Perth, then check whether he is an active member of National Electrical and Communications Association (NECA) of WA.

These are some important tips that might help you to find the best electrician.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/how-to-choose-a-professional-electrician.htm - Article Side

Brad Jensen - About Author:
Identifying the best a Perth electrician is the key to resolve your homeâ€™s electrical problem effectively in time. The author is an expert in the Perth electrical arena and has written many articles regarding a electrical contractor Perth and a electrical Perth professionals in the past.

Article Keywords:
Perth electrician, electrical contractor perth, perth electrical, electrical perth

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!