Noida is considered as one of the modern suburbs in Delhi in National Capital Region. In the 34 years of existence, Noida had developed itself in all manners and fields like from being an assorted industrial cluster, it is now industrial- cum- residential hub with world class amenities.

In all the development, Noida has developed in the sector of education too. The literacy rate of Noida is continuously increasing. The schools in Noida are affiliated to CBSE, ICSE and UP Board. There are good schools in most of the sectors of Noida. Various types of schools are there in Noida. 3 of them are residential schools, English medium and co educational schools.

Parents from all over the north India or any other part of the country look forward to the residential schools of Noida. The residential schools in Noida cater to all academics as well as residential needs of a student. The residential schools in Noida are Amity International School, Apeejay School, Delhi Public School, Genesis Global School, Jagran Public School and Army Public School. These schools are quite different from the ordinary schools as they provide boarding and lodging facility in the campus itself. Children residing in these schools get to develop their social, emotional and mental frame and learn to co-operate with each other through mutual understanding. They become so flexible in life that they never face a problem of adjustment anywhere as the atmosphere at residential schools in Noida is very cosmopolitan. These schools are also famous for their meals.

The medium of instruction for these schools is English. There are many English medium schools in Noida affiliated to either CBSE or ICSE. Categories in which these schools are available are co educational schools, all boy and all girlsâ€™ schools. English medium schools in Noida are Army Public School, J.P International School, NS Public School, Cambridge School, Ryan International School.

These schools are well known in the field of education as well as in all the other fields like music and sports. The schools impart education in easy to understand language to students and special attention is given to the weak students.

There are various co educational schools in Noida. These schools are affiliated to either CBSE or ICSE or the state board. The medium of instruction could be English or Hindi. These schools aim at providing standard meaningful education to the students and developing their individual personality. Some of the co educational schools in Noida are Apeejay International School, Delhi Public Schools, Greater Valley School, Kothari International School and many more. The education provided by these schools as well as the infrastructure of the schools is of high level. The focus of these schools is not only to develop a child academically but extracurricular activities are also considered as an important part. Exposure to the different activities, availability of all kind of games, and libraries with thousands of books helps in the overall development of the student. Computer labs with more than 35 computers give adequate practice time to students individually. Teachers of these schools are well qualified and experts in their field. And they adopt friendlier way of teacher for better interaction with students.

Therefore, there is no harm in saying that the schools in Noida meet all the requirements of parents and the students. If a child chooses to be a student in any of the school of Noida then a bright future for him/her is sure.
