Article Side

Incorporate Your California Business by William Hauselberg

Article published on January 25th 2012 | Business

If your California business has elements of both sole proprietorship as well as a partnership, it is important to file your Limited Liability Company (LLC) with the state. An LLC gives limited liability to its owners and controls how the company is run. It establishes the relationship between owners and dictates just how much ownership each party has within the business. The formation of an LLC offers many benefits, including choice of tax regime, protections against certain liabilities, and reduced risk of fire-sale acquisitions.

A professional filing entity can walk you through the process of how to form an LLC in California. In fact, the process can even be quick and easy. Look for a company that makes multiple daily trips to Californiaâ€™s Secretary of State to be sure your LLC moves through quickly.

Be Proactive in the Process

Before visiting the filing company, you can get started on the process on your own. First, determine a primary and backup name for your entity. It is important to have a backup name to help ensure availability. Next, prepare the California LLC Articles of Organization. This packet can be found online in PDF format through the California Secretary of State. Finally, simply contact Sacramento filing company to submit your documentation and complete the process. Due to the convenient location, forms are hand delivered to the Secretary of State each day, three times per day.

The entire process is relatively simple and can be done on your own, but if you prefer, a filing company can prepare your documents for you as well.

Once the state has processed your document, you will be issued a state corporate number along with two certified copies. Upon receipt of your copies, you will be required to complete a Statement of Information form. Your filing company will provide you with this form. You can choose to mail the form yourself along with a fee; this method requires a wait time of several months for a filed copy. You can, however, take advantage of a filing companyâ€™s services to file the Statement for you at a much faster turnaround time, providing you with both convenience and peace of mind.

The same process applies for those who are looking to file California Corporation's Articles of Incorporation.

For more information on LLCs and how to form a corporation in California, contact a Sacramento filing entity today.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/incorporate-your-california-business.htm - Article Side

William Hauselberg - About Author:
The author has an immense knowledge on a how to form an LLC in California. Know more about a how to form a corporation in California related info in his website.

Article Keywords:
how to form an LLC in California, how to form a corporation in California

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!