Intense Marketing through Corporate Events by Devaabrata

Article published on January 17th 2012 | Business

Introduction and demonstration of branded products or services through real time corporate events is a very powerful and effective ways of marketing.This method of marketing is known as experiential marketing. Either the companies who are marketing the products or services themselves will conduct the programs for experiential marketing or it will be done by professional groups that have specialized in experiential marketing. For the purpose of promoting a product, they will conduct corporate events such as road-shows, conferences, product launch contests, award functions etc. Such events which are held as part of the marketing campaign by a firm are called Experiential Events.

The various aspects of the events such as its theme, the entertainment programs on that occasion, the graphics, snacks and beverages served, the mementoes presented to the guests etc will have relevance to the brand item that they want to introduce and promote in the market. The experiential marketing agencies employ high caliber marketing professionals who will be capable of presenting the product to the public impressively and convincingly and thereby push the product up to the status of a leading brand in the market.

An event of experiential marketing becomes successful if it could create a longstanding impact in the minds of those who participated in the event about the products that were launched or demonstrated during the event. The event organizers use advanced materials and marketing techniques to convince the masses about the merits of the product and also they encourage the participants to take part in the events and interact. This is a very powerful method of creating interest in a particular product in the minds of so many people at a time and moreover they will spread the information they have gathered from the events to others in their family as well as business circles. Thus the effect of Experiential Events conducted by professional marketing agencies will be lasting and wide spread. Almost all household products like TV, Fridge, kitchen appliances, washing machines, furniture, mobile phones, Insurance plans, built houses etc can be effectively marketed through professionally organized events of experiential marketing.

During the corporate events of experiential marketing, the technical knowledge of the manufacturer about his products is propagated by the marketing professionals by virtue of their vast experience. Thus the message reaches the audience correctly, convincingly and effectively. The audience as a whole is the focus of the entire show and the marketing professionals put all efforts to transform the interest of the audience into real business.
