ISO  is the acronym of Standardization  for Organization. International Organization for Standardization, responsible for the ISO 9000, ISO 14000, ISO 27000, ISO 22000 and other international management standards. The International Organization for Standardization is organized by some ISO body. ISO provides a broad range of information and consulting services to insurance companies, ranging from statistical and actuarial information to policy language to risk assessment for specific locations. ISO is perhaps best known as the company that provides ISO ratings for local fire departments, used by insurance companies to determine premiums for homeowner policies in that area.

ISO maintains a group of quality management system standards referred to as ISO 9000. Since ISO 9001 embraces the importance of having all staff committed, employees must be trained and understand how they practice ISO 9001 on a daily basis.

The International Organization for Standardization (ISO) manages over 18,000 industry standards. ISO 9001 is the ISO standard that governs quality management systems. ISO 9001 internal auditor training helps professionals prepare to validate compliance to this standard.

ISO 9001 certification training refers to the preparation required for passing a formal audit that examines the compliance of a company to the standards of ISO 9001:2008 set by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO). Getting ready for this examination takes several months. It involves refining internal processes and cleaning up documentation to reflect accurately the operations of the company. Since ISO 9001 embraces the importance of having all staff committed, employees must be trained and understand how they practice ISO 9001 on a daily basis.

Identification

ISO 9001 auditors are professionals charged with the task of ensuring an organization complies with quality management standards. Organizations can validate compliance to ISO 9001 through an internal auditor, client audits or an independent certifying body.

Features

ISO 9001 training is flexible; most professionals complete training sessions online. The training modules have a "Save and Exit" feature, which allows individuals to work at their own pace.

Significance

Companies use quality management systems to manufacture products and services at a consistent standard. The ability for an organization to advertise that its quality management system is ISO 9001 compliant is a significant branding statement.
