It is the paper which covers current events in a point of view of the man on the street. It is always a pleasure to read about the local news in the Post. The news items are well presented, the arrangement is so good that the paper is a natural page turner. One would never find the thought of putting the paper down till one has perused al the corners of the paper.

Many people would get their local news in Los Angeles Post and no other paper. It is more than a habit it is a ritual which sets the pace and dictates the emerging patterns in this vivacious city.

For the latest budget news one could depend on this talented paper to give us the insight.

Among the current news in the USA one would find the election and its coverage topping every other news. In the thick of things, the Presidential candidates Mitt Romney and Newt Gingrinch seem to see-sawing as they try and battle for a place to run against President Barack Obama.

In the news also is Mr. Herman Cainâ€™s proposed revision of the tax structure into a 9-9-9 model, though seeming to be a path-breaking new effort, is seen by many as a revamped model of the old tax structure itself. Since the current news in Los Angeles is revolving around the recession and tax plans it is interesting to see the views of Mr. Cain developing into an echo of the sentimentalities and the wishes of the people of America.

Among the various USA news items the way the President decided to shift stance over the use of contraceptives has raised a lot of voices among the Republicans.

Lovely coverage of news and events, the Post as The Los Angeles Post is more popularly referred to be a presenter of the true views of the people of America. The site itself is fast loading and the movements between the sections are fast and undisturbed.

The sports section is crisp and there are many debates on the games currently in progress. It is also well represented in the arts and entertainment section, and one finds several articles which are of interest. â€œDeconstructing Hollywoodâ€•, an art piece based on the lives and the culture of the people of California attempts to show the difference in life styles between the people of the Northern California from their Southern partners. This piece by John Waguespack made California news with its revelations is seen as an eye opener.

In the miscellaneous news Chinaâ€™s increasing interest in Africa is seen by experts as a method by which it hopes to harness the energy, exploit the natural resources and find new and cheap labor for its expansion activities.

There is an interesting section for networkers or social networking dummies. It helps people find their way around. The cartoons section is also sure to hold the interest of children and many adults too. It has social networking tools (Facebook and Twitter) by means of which one may follow these from their own sites.
