vJack, a resident of Montreal for generations had after completion of his undergraduate course started a new business of engineering products. He made a fine business plan, developed his team of engineers and set up a unit. He looked after the marketing himself. He visited the prospective clients, demonstrated the product. One of them took great interest in the products Jackâ€™s company produced and asked for his contact details. Jack borrowed a pen and paper from the person and wrote in details the address and contact number. Jack was hopeful to win over this client who can give him business all throughout the year. However, when he didnâ€™t receive any response from the person in over a monthâ€™s time, he got in touch with the person on his own. On contact he understood that the person had misplaced his contact details and as a result could not get in touch with Jack though there was an urgent requirement. Jack got the contract, thankfully. However, he realized that getting a well designed carte affaire was his immediate requirement. His father referred him to the leader in imprimerie Montreal services company, Arts o Graph.
