The nature of a campaign determines the campaign sign and depending upon this, campaign signs vary. The main thing while designing a symbol is to ensure that it is able to make the point that the campaigning is being done for. You can make it light hearted or austere, as it is completely your discretion. However, it must convey the message that have in mind and want to spread as well. It is true that hoardings and placards make messages readable but if you want to make an impression, you need to plan everything very carefully. Making a wider impact has always been remained the main aim of campaigning.

If you want your campaign to be an effective one, you need to follow certain easy steps. The first and foremost thing is to decide the scale of campaigning. For local issues where it involves a few blocks and people, you can put up hoarding and placards in bold prints or handwritten. You can even give downloaded pictures that are applicable for your cause. The pictures can be cut from newspapers, magazines or may be illustrated with paintings as well. However, for a bigger campaigning, the campaign sign need to be a large one. The message should be printed on one side and on the other, there must be free space for supports to come and sign on it.

If you opt for campaign yard signs, they would be beneficial for you since you would get a chance to accumulate popular support. However, you need to make sure that the illustrations and writings are not over the top. Using thick cardboard is a good idea since it would work as a resistant material against harsh sunlight and rain. There could be nothing like adding a coating of transparent filament to the signs. You must remember that making an attractive signboard does not mean that you need to spend a lot of money rather you need to plan intelligently.
