Maximize your storage experience with these easy tips by Simon Dcruz

Having gotten a great deal at the storage facility, one might think that the only thing left to do now would be to decide when to move in with all the stuff. One will be surprised to find not just storage greenhorns but also veterans who make this mistake. Most among them are simply happy to reduce the clutter in their lives and regain some usable space for themselves. However, of the biggest causes for having a bad storage experience comes from improper storage and handling on part of tenants.

To ensure that the entire storage experience is a happy one, here are a few tips to keep handy:

ïƒ˜ While the facility could have the top-of-the range fighting measures in place, it does help to play ones own part in preventing fire related disasters. Following proper guidelines on what can be stored and what not is crucial ïƒ˜ Prevent articles from leaning against walls. They could tip over on themselves or over other valuables ïƒ˜ Leaving ample space for movement along the walls of the enclosure is a wise decision to make, rather than packing the place up to its gills ïƒ˜ Frequent use articles must be kept within easy access, preferably near the entry points while the farther ends could be used to accommodate items that will not need to be at hand ïƒ˜ Most quality storage operators provide units with higher than usual ceiling space. Maximize this vertical space by stacking up, rather than leaving it unused ïƒ˜ Packing boxes are most efficient when they are utilized to full capacity. This allows them to be stacked easily rather than collapsing under the weight if left partially empty ïƒ˜ Fragile and less sturdy items should be packed in bubble wrap or linen pieces that are being kept at the self storage facility ïƒ˜ Anti-skid mats to place articles are a great idea for those who love to stack stuff up to the ceiling ïƒ˜ Storage pallets too are a handy accessory to have around if one wishes to isolate their belongings from the floor (minimizes risk of moisture damage in non-climate controlled facilities) ïƒ˜ Always have detailed labeling on boxes. This facilitates the identification of the box contents at-a-glance!

Besides the above tips, one of the most important things that one should do is to get their belongings insured for the duration that they are to be in storage. Leading operators often have tie-ups with leading insurers that offer competitive terms and wide ranging coverage. Opting for customized storage solutions from operators like Beirut Moving and Storage can often be one of the better decisions that one can take when storing personal belongings. Known for their stellar customer service and competitive terms, it is no wonder that they are one of the most popular operators in the region.
