Phoenix Pool Contractors:- Finding Qualified Phoenix Pool Contractors by Microcell Systems

Article published on June 25th 2012 | Business

To find a first rate, extremely qualified Phoenix Pool Contractors, you will need to do a lot of research. Fortunately, in this day and age, there are many tools available to help you find the very best pool Contractors in your area.

The website is your best research tool as it will give you access to not only pool builders websites, but unbiased information about the pool builders as well. On the web, you can find the Phoenix Pool Contractors Better Business Bureauâ€™s rating, how many complaints were filed against the pool builders, and if and how these complaints were resolve.

You need to also keep in consideration how many pool projects the pool builders that you are considering have done. For example, if they have built 150 pools in their years of business and there are six complaints, which is a bigger red flag than a company who has built 15,000 pools with six complaints. You may also want to check out online review sites such as Yelp and Angieâ€™s List.

Although they may not be the most accurate measurement of how good pool builders are (since most people are much more likely to put up a posting when they have a negative experience than when they have a positive one.). If prospective pool builders in your area tell you about their qualifications, certifications and experience, make them prove it or check yourself. One of the most highly respected and leading professional organizations for pool builder is the Association of Pool and Spa Professionals (APSP).

The Association of Pool & Spa Professionals provides assistance to consumers in selecting pool builders who are dedicated to safe design and encourage the responsible use of waterscape creations. Their members continually work with nationally recognized safety groups as well as federal, state and local governments to make sure consumers are protected and have the most up-to-date information, products and services for effective pool and spa safety. By working with APSP Pool Contractors, you will receive the highest in quality standards for your recreational project and enjoy the work of professionals who are dedicated to the safety of your family and guests.

State and local requirements may vary from state to state, and even in local cities and municipalities. APSP Pool Contractors are more apt to provide you with vital information regarding building a pool and spa thatâ€™s specific to where you live. They are more than willing to share information and documentation on their business including:

â€¢ Contractor license issued by state, county or municipality

â€¢ Company history, including the number of years established in your specific area

â€¢ The owner or presidentâ€™s personal history in the pool and spa industry

â€¢ Proof of general and personal liability insurance, workersâ€™ compensation and insurance limits

â€¢ List of client and business references, including architects, home builders, interior designers

And custom home builders

â€¢ An explanation of lien laws, waivers and releases as they pertain to your specific area

â€¢ Activities in the community, including associations with non-profit, civic and business organizations.
