Pink Dusters & pink cleaning by Thomas Parker

Article published on June 11th 2012 | Business

In this article, youâ€™ll discover a little bit about breast cancer. There are various companies throughout the United States and the rest of the world who offer pink programs to help fund breast cancer care and research. That is, pink is the color which has come to represent breast cancer awareness, so pink programs are those that contribute to breast cancer awareness or fund breast cancer research. For example, the company Pink Janitorial Supplies creates pink cleaning products, including pink c-fold towels and Pink Dusters; a portion of the proceeds they make from their cleaning supplies goes toward breast cancer research and will help to increase awareness in the public about breast cancer.

Breast cancer can really strike any woman. The causes of breast cancer are thus far unknown, so itâ€™s hard to say whether you can prevent it or if you can simply do your part to become aware of symptoms and how to identify them. If you catch a cancerous growth early, youâ€™ll be able to more easily stop it from overtaking your whole body. So, to become more aware of breast cancer symptoms, pink programs are started. Buying pink c-fold towels may seem unimportant or as if it just wouldnâ€™t help that much. But ultimately, it will, because your small purchase adds up with everyone elseâ€™s small purchases. Youâ€™re able to continually remind yourself and your daughters or other female family members and friends that you should take the time to get your mammograms, get your checkups, pay attention to your body, and do breast self-exams. If you catch the disease early, itâ€™s usually a solvable situation, and remission rates are pretty decent as well.

There are different treatment options for each stage of breast cancer that you are in, or that you find yourself in. Through simply participating in these simple pink product programs such as buying a Pink Duster, you may find that you have really helped to provide funding for those who canâ€™t afford breast cancer treatment in full, for example. You are able to spread awareness and youâ€™re able to understand what treatment options are best for people in a given stage. This is simply because you became aware, you did the research, and now if you experience breast cancer or someone does in your life, youâ€™ll be more prepared to battle and win.
