Porch swings are beautiful furniture items designed to provide a ravishing look to the outdoors. These furniture pieces are ideal for relaxation purpose during hot summer evenings. Reading a book while enjoying the swing can be quite fascinating. They are also used during outdoor picnic and excursion purpose. Porch swings are becoming one of the most important garden furniture items in recent days. In fact, these furniture items can also be installed within big spacious verandas. But, they look best in lawn and well maintained patios.

These swinging furniture pieces are usually made from metal or wood. Cedar is the most preferable option when it comes to the quality of wood. It is considered best because of the natural looks. Moreover, it is resistant to fungi, rot, and mold. Cedar is also strongly weather resistant. The quality does not deteriorate even while facing strong rainfall, snow, or sun rays.

There are two type of cedar used commonly for manufacturing these outdoor furniture items. These are Western Red and White cedars. Among these two variants, Western Red Cedars are more popular among the buyers. They have better looks as well as smoother texture. Cypress wood is also considered good for manufacturing swings and Park Bench because they are resistant to fungus and other insects. But, when we talk of pine, it comes at cheapest price and are also resistant to rots but do not have that smoother texture.

A normal sized porch swing can hold two adult persons comfortably (definitely in seated position). The overall design of the swing differs mainly in one area: backrest. The backrest differs from one porch to another. However if custom-made, then the design of backrest can be mentioned clearly to the carpenter. Although there are plenty of Porch Swings available readymade in the market, but custom-made products are much better options for those who have a taste of design and art.
