Several middle class families and employed professionals wish to own car however the rising market prices of these vehicles often prevent them from doing so. Therefore, these individuals generally prefer to opt for second handcars sold by call dealers. There are several benefits of purchasing used cars however the only downside associated with a second hand car is that you know nothing about its previous owners. In such cases, you might require extended warranty on car.

Even if your car is not in its warranty period, you can still get the car warranty extended by accessing outside sources. Several car agencies conduct tests on the condition of the car sold by them and evaluate its servicing status. If they feel that theyâ€™re in a good state, they offer an extended warranty period. If routine maintenance issues arise, you can get the car repaired quite easily.

Many dealerships, car manufactures and agents offer warranties for cars after carefully analyzing their condition. They have different certifications for each individual car. These certifications depend on car model. Generally the warranty offered in such cases ranges from six to twenty months. In some cases, users might get additional warranties, based upon the age and mileage of the car.

The best thing about purchasing extended warranty vehicles is they save your bucks in case of accidental injuries. If your car breaks down, you donâ€™t have to pay the entire sum, a major part shall be covered by warranty providers. However, there are certain restrictions in terms of age and mileage limits. Additionally, some providers offer you warranty if you take your vehicles to selected repairing centers only. Before providing extended warranty, some providers take your four-wheeler to a nearby garage or servicing center to verify the mileage and current status. Based on the reports, they shall calculate the estimated costs for covering future repairs and offer you the warrant cards.

Have you ever heard of â€œroadside assistanceâ€•? Well it is a common feature offered in most cases. Roadside assistance basically refers to the facilities that are provided in case of emergencies. If your vehicle breaks down by the roadside, you can immediately call on the toll free number provided by your dealers to ask for quick assistance. The servicing centers shall provide you help within 24 hours. This facility is available 24X7. Your autos will not only be towed and repaired but made brand new without spending any money. All the charges shall be covered by cars auto warranty plans. So, be intelligent and act cleverly. If youâ€™ve recently purchased a second-hand four wheeler, make sure you get it covered under car insurances or warranty plans.
