Swimming pool construction is a specialized field and requires skills that only reputable swimming pool builders will have. There are many different phases of pool construction and experienced Swimming Pool Builders will have a specialized staff of experts to complete each phase.

The first phase is the design phase. You may have a design in mind but good swimming pool builders will make sure that the design best suits your needs and the fits well into the design of your whole backyard. For example, if you have little children, you may want an oversized first step into the pool which will provide a large, shallow, and safe area for them to play in. This same area can be used to put a lounge chair in so that you can rest while in the water.

Next comes the construction phase of your pool project and this is where you will see if swimming pool builders that you are interviewing really know their craft. For some states, this industry is not regulated so you need to do your homework. Experienced and reputable swimming pool builders will show you how they will construct your pool. They will show you diagrams of how much steel that they will use and how much and what kind of plumbing they will install. Good swimming pool builders will explain why this is important for your pool, not only for safety, put to protect your investment as well. Steel holds you pool securely in the ground and keeps it from moving and cracking. It is not an area that you want to scrimp on and if swimming pool builders try to do so, they are just trying to save themselves money. All steel schedules are not the same.

Plumbing is also an important phase in pool constructions because it controls how well your water flows. Professional swimming pool builders use bigger plumbing pipes to move the water faster, which then makes the water cleaner. It is also more efficient to use bigger plumbing and will save you money on your electrical bill. These savings add up over the course of time and are much more than saving a few dollars on smaller pipes.

Gunite is added in the next phase of construction and it is extremely important that you use swimming pool builders that shoot the gunite in the bottom of the pool first. Gunite is strongest when it is first applied and if you shoot the walls first, weaker gunite will fall to the bottom. Swimming pool builders with experienced gunite crews will not use the fallen gunite for any part of the pool.

Next comes tile and rock phases. Once again, you should ask swimming pool builders if they have their own special crews for these phases. Tile setting and waterfall building is an art, and you have to use artisans who work only on these phases day after day to get a beautiful, professional look.

So when you ask swimming pool builders to bid on your pool, make sure they have expertise in all phases of construction.
