The gulf coast claims facility is a regulating body whose primarily job would have been to make sure that all the victims of the oil spill disaster would get rightful compensation. However, all the gccf seems to be doing is constantly looking for the needle in the haystack to deny, ignore or block the Claims. They are not interested if you owned a business which was fully shut down as a direct result of the oil spill. Now you have to move on, open your business elsewhere and you could definitely use the money from the compensation to do that. Your family has lost itâ€™s primarily means of income, but the GCCF is just simply not interested in thatâ€¦...

At the beginning, there was a huge media frenzy going with the publicity of the best regulatory body which is the GCCF. This organization runs under the supervision of the BP, and since the BP has taken full responsibility for the damages it caused, people trusted they will keep their word. The gulf coast claims facility seemed to be the easiest way to access your compensation funds quickly and easily. It also seemed as the number one organization that would also offer you assistance and advice as to how, when and how much compensation to seek. This was done on purpose, so that you wouldnâ€™t even think of hiring a lawyer and go against the â€œrulesâ€• of the GCCF.

Sadly, hundreds of individuals and businesses are still waiting for some sort of compensation, even today when almost 2 years have passed since the tragedy. It is definitely time to change your tactics, and go aggressively after that compensation. The best way to file the gccf claims is to allow a trustworthy team of attorneys to help. They will make sure that your file is complete with all the important documents, and if needed they will file a lawsuit against the gccf. The lawsuit is primarily an option if:

- the claim is denied once more

- the client receives underpayment proposals

- the claim gets rejected or blocked

Forget about going for the gccf directly, especially if you want to have access to a fair compensation process. The GCCF knows that having to deal with an entire team of aggressive attorneys will not do them or the BP any goodâ€¦.....So you should choose the best way to get fair compensation today!
