Travel Tips 101: on Choosing the Best Luggage by Abigail Schoorl

Article published on May 17th 2012 | Business

Whether itâ€™s for a month long vacation in Greece or a weekend getaway on the white beaches of Cartagena, you need to have all the necessary materials to ensure that youâ€™ll have a memorable and hassle-free vacation. Aside from preparing your tickets, certifications, and accommodations, you also need to do a lot of packing.

Packing for a vacation can be stressful, especially if your luggage cannot accommodate your favorite items. Some people would advise you to just bring the essentials, but you really canâ€™t leave the items that have great sentimental value to you. The best solution to avoid feeling overwhelmed during packing is to have a big, sturdy luggage that can accommodate as many valuables as possible.

Also, itâ€™s ideal to keep your clothes rolled up so that they wonâ€™t take much of the luggage space. Yo luggage is an essential tool in your vacation as itâ€™s the only thing that will keep your clothes, shoes, and belongings protected and secure from harmful elements. Here are some helpful tips on choosing the best luggage for your trip:

Material

A typical luggage is often made from leather, polycarbonate, polypropylene, nylon, metal and plastic. For short trips, itâ€™s advisable to purchase luggage that are made from lightweight materials such as nylon and leather. However, for longer trips, itâ€™s best to purchase luggage that are made from polypropylene or polycarbonate that can withstand force and other outdoor elements.

Strength

Even though your luggage is big enough to accommodate larger items, if itâ€™s not sturdy, it might cause you problems in the long run. Before buying luggage, examine and test its strength first so that youâ€™ll be assured it will not tear or break due to the weight itâ€™s carrying. A good example is Brig & Riley luggage that are made from sturdy materials and are specially designed to deliver both durability and strength.

Construction

Zippers, straps, joints, webbings, wheels, and handles make a good Briggs luggage. You have to pay attention to the quality of these details, as well as to the overall construction of the luggage you are eyeing. This can assure you that it will last for a long time, even for your next travel adventure.

Price

A high quality luggage can sometimes be costly, but a trusty Briggs luggage will surely prove to be a great investment over time. You can also check out more affordable luggage options that do not compromise quality. Visit usaflightinsurance.com for more info on choosing the right luggage.
