Article Side

Understanding Personal Injury Claims

by Alecia Longsworth

Article published on March 22nd 2012 | Business

Life can easily be filled with endeavors that expose an individual to a variety of accidents or injury. After all, an accident is an accident - you cannot stop it. Many individuals try to prevent getting involved in disasters, but they still end up in one. In circumstances like this, one cannot help but ask who is to blame. Here is where personal injury law enters.

What is personal injury?

A personal injury case is a legal fight that occurs when a person experiences an injury, whether physical or psychological, that was caused by another individual or party. There are two ways a personal injury may be settled. First is by means of an official lawsuitâ€”a litigant submits a complaint against a defendant and settles the case in court. The defendants are not essentially individuals; they can be businesses, companies, or government bureaus that have acted irresponsibly, leading to the injury obtained by the litigant.

The other means to resolve a personal injury suit is with informal settlement, where both parties are represented by their attorneys. This settlement is carried out with a negotiation and is succeeded by a written agreement that both parties consent to abandon any legal action and instead work out the conflict with compensation that is jointly agreed upon.

Where to file a complaint

Personal injury lawsuits fall under the legal system of the courts of the state where the accident occurred or where the involved parties are located. For instance, if a road accident happened in Chicago, the victim can file a personal injury lawsuit in the Supreme Court of Illinois. A Chicago personal injury lawyer can also help a victim, who was hurt by another party from a different state, submit the lawsuit under the federal high court.

Obtaining compensation

A personal injury attorney Chicago residents recommend can claim two types of damages for their clients: general damages and special damages. The first kind delivers compensation for the victim's agony and loss of future earnings. It is rewarded to the victim and the amount is determined by the court. The second kind handles actual financial loss up to the date of the trial.

Nonetheless, victims of personal injury should keep in mind that filing a lawsuit does not ensure they will win. It is critical that they collaborate with their Chicago personal injury attorney every single step of the way to guarantee they receive the justice and the settlement they ought to get. For more info on personal injury law and suits, check out dmv.org/automotive-law/personal-injury.php.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/understanding-personal-injury-claims.htm - Article Side

Alecia Longsworth - About Author:
For more information, please search a Chicago personal injury lawyer, a personal injury attorney Chicago and a Chicago personal injury attorney in Google.

Article Keywords:
chicago personal injury attorney, chicago personal injury lawyer, personal injury attorney chicago

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!