Article published on July 19th 2012 | Business

Lots of different industries require air freight or sea freight services in order to transport their products to other countries across the globe. Air freight is obviously much faster than sea freight services but is also more expensive. For companies who require more urgent shipments then air freight will be the best choice.

Whether youâ€™re sending or receiving goods you will need to use the services of an air freight or sea freight carrier who has all the knowledge and experience of handling all kinds of fright effectively. Companies rely heavily on the services of freight companies and you will need to use a company who is reliable and will get your shipments out on time, to the right places and intact.

A good air freight and sea freight company will have access to a worldwide agency network to ensure fast and efficient deliverers. They will also offer a full warehousing service to store your goods and ship them as and when required. Common items that are sent via air freight or sea freight are pharmaceutical products, perishables, live animals, international exports, firearms, electronic goods, gifts, clothing and many their products.

The services that an air freight provider will offer can be tailored to your businesses particular requirements. You may be looking for a complete service including packing, warehousing and delivery. Other businesses may solely need air freight or sea freight delivery services.

There are lots of official procedures and regulations to follow when sending goods via air freight or sea freight and the freight company will be able to handle all this for you. The freight company will deal with terminal handling procedures, shipping documentation, security, customs clearance and inspections and any associated fees. Some companies will require both air freight and sea freight services depending on where they need to send their goods too. Using the same company for both these services will ensure you have better control over the exportation of your items.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/using-air-freight-services.htm - Article Side

- About Author:
a Air freight from aviatorairfreight.co.za is prompt, timely and dependable and all services are carried out by fully qualified and seasoned specialists. Our a sea freight solutions cater for all specific requirements.

Article Keywords:
Air freight, sea freight

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!