Variance amid World School, Residential School & Public Schools by

Article published on May 15th 2012 | Business

First I would like to explain you the major difference between the world school, residential school and a public school. A world school often caters you the world class facilities in their school. They are charging a little bit more fees as compare to the public schools. The world school is a place where your child is feeling like to sitting in any British school. Many non residential foreigners are also keen to get their wards admission in these schools. The owner authority of such schools are basically belongs to foreign ventures who has collaborated here in India with many schools in metro cities. The major faculty and teaching curriculum is also based in the foreign patterns only. The IB formula of study is a common format which is applies in Delhi.

This is a way of studies or teaching and learning methodology which is totally designed according to the study patterns in US, Australia or any other western country. The students who have been passed out from such schools can easily get admission in any higher degree level course in the foreign country on the basis of their marks and over all personality. These are fully English medium and co-ed schools. The infrastructures of such schools are also based on foreign architectures. So, is not Amazing plan of India government who has helped Indians to avail the foreign standards study package here in India too?

Residential boarding school is little bit different from the whole boarding and day boarding schools in India. In the entire boarding school the students has to stay for the entire year of schooling in the school premises only, sometimes in the winter break or summer breaks, if any other school assignment is not pending for the students which is being completed during these holidays, then they may allow for the outing to their parents or home towns.

Other wise only in the week ends these students are allowed for some hang outs along with their friends in some amusement park, for watching movie, or just for shopping in some malls. Generally the fully boarding schools are not co-educational schools, either they are pure boyâ€™s school or girlâ€™s school but the residential day boarding schools may be co-educational also. Here the students can study for the fixed period in the day hours may be from morning 8am to evening 8pm. By the end of the parents can come to schools to pick their children back along with them. Students can avail the primary and secondary classes under this scheme too.

If both the parents are working and they wont get time to take care of their children in their absence then such schools plays the vital role in providing the complete care to their students just like the parents. The study curriculum of such schools are also very highly graded and afflicted by the major schools boards in India. At the school premises children will get all those facilities which heshe generally use at their home.
