When we think about transportation, there are several modes of transportation- Roadways, Marine transportation,Railways, Airways. Those modes have their unique uses. If we divide their uses then we can have something like given below for every modes of transportation.

Modes of Transportation

Roadways

Its is an oldest form of transportation used for moving for goods almost used in local market. The automobile overturned road transport and today freight trucks, wagons and trailers carry large volumes of goods across highways. A roads were established first, so its a trend that people have been still using Roadways.

Yacht Transportation.Its has unique feature. It has always been an important mode to transport goods across countries and continents. It consumes less energy as compared to roadways or rail, cargo ships can carry thousands of tons of freight in a single trip from one port to another.

Through Marine, goods can be easily transported from a country to another and through rail or Roadways to its local areas.

Railways

After the need of Industrial Revolution, rail transport resolved more issues like for transportation of goods and transportation of people. There are high speed rail transport, who has proved to be efficient in transporting goods over large distance in countries like the USA, Russia and China..

Airways

Well, you all know that aircraft transporting has generally been limited to areas. There are some carriers services like the Boeing 707 and 727 can transport limited amount of cargo at a time.

It has prevented the time and cost of transportation and limitation in the volume of goods. It can be transferred at a time.
