Wholesaledeals Scam-Truth or Fiction?

by Brad Smith

Article published on December 23rd 2011 | Business

How much faith should you put in reports of Wholesaledeals scam? Wholesaledeals.co.uk has made a name for itself through its reliable service and authentic wholesale database. Hundreds of buyers benefit through this site, according to Wholesaledeals reviews. Therefore, reports of Wholesaledeals scam do tend to sound a bit farfetched.

This does not mean you should blindly trust all wholesale directories. Sadly, the prevalence of retail scam on the internet has given rise to rumours of wholesaledeals scam. Most people who stumbled upon the Wholesale Deals directory were probably scammed by numerous wholesalers online, before they found the site wholesaledeals.co.uk. Today, many of these people are power sellers on eBay, offering top merchandize to customers at competitive rates without reducing their own profit margin.

Just because many other sites that promise wholesale discounts, are scam, does not necessarily mean that Wholesaledeals scam rumours are true. The site admin, according to reviews, goes through numerous wholesale deals before listing the most lucrative bargains for wholesale buyers. Unlike other wholesale directories that never check supplier credibility or deal profitability, Wholesale Deals puts in a lot of effort to ensure that no bogus suppliers find their way into the directory.

Other than supplier verification, Wholesale Deals offers other advantages that lay to rest all rumours of wholesaledeals scam:

â€¢ Wholesaledeals membership is very affordable. The site was developed by people who understand the challenges that buyers and internet traders face. Most people who are trying to set up a small business or an ecommerce store, do not have the resources that large retailers do. Wholesale Deals makes allowances for them by keeping membership fees low. If there was even a bit of truth in reports of wholesaledeals scam, you would have had to pay unreasonably high fees to gain membership.

â€¢ Wholesale Deals does not ask members for any fee other than the initial membership fee. The only other fee you pay is when you renew membership. In addition to that, the site offers discounts for long term membership. No wonder competitors had to start rumors of Wholesaledeals scam; there is no other way for them to draw people away from a reliable, trustworthy, and affordable resource such as the Wholesale Deals website.

â€¢ The products selling through this site all have been tried and tested in competitive marketplaces such as eBay. You donâ€™t have to worry about stocks that remain unsold because buyers did not like them. Another reason not to trust stories of Wholesaledeals scam.

â€¢ Each deal listing is accompanied by information such as recommended retail price, wholesale price, and price on eBay. You are also told how many units to purchase in order to get a discount. Wholesaledeals scam? Obviously not.

â€¢ The buyer can subscribe to the newsletter for information about each deal. This is another factor that falsifies reports of wholesaledeals scam. No scammer ever sends out detailed, informative newsletters on a weekly basis. In fact, the buyer can opt for the newsletter service without having to pay the membership fee, just to test the waters.

Stories of wholesaledeals scam have not had much impact on the regular Wholesale Deals buyers or people who have been in the ecommerce business and have personally faced many types of retail scams. Here are some reasons why.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/wholesaledeals-scam-truth-or-fiction.htm - Article Side

Brad Smith - About Author:
Due to these reasons, buyers have rejected claims of a wholesaledeals scam. Their very success in ecommerce offsets all types of stories about a wholesaledeals scams.

Article Keywords:
wholesaledeals scam, wholesaledeals scams

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!