Article Side

Why You Need a Personal Licence

by Julia Roger

Article published on June 5th 2012 | Business

The course for a Personal Licence, which is required by the individual who intends in associating himself with the sale of alcohol, provides the licensees with a comprehensive idea and clear understanding of the pertinent framework of the laws and regulations. These are found in the Licensing Act of 2003. They point out and outline the responsibilities of the license holder. Along with this, the course will cover the required work for the process of application. It also goes through the differences in this license and the premise license.

There are two kinds of courses available in the market. The NCPLH course covers England and Wales. The SCPLH course pertains to Scotland. These courses are available both as real time classes and as online facilities. Learning online will cost you less, take up less of our time and will let you work out a flexible schedule for your studies.

The individual taking the course has to go through and understand the various roles and the legal responsibilities that he will have to bear as instructed by the law. The penalties issued in the case these responsibilities are not carried out are also clearly classified in the course. Any failure to comply with the regulations set by the authorities can result in revocation of your license. They licensees will also have a clear idea of what comprises unauthorized sale or temporary license.

The course also covers the authority of the police concerning the licensee and his license. It covers when and how the police can suspend the license and close down the premises of sale of alcohol. This segment covers both the benefits and the adverse effects, the later being more in number. Personal License holders are also held responsible for protecting the minors and children from the harmful effects of alcohol.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/why-you-need-a-personal-licence.htm - Article Side

Julia Roger - About Author:
For more information on a Personal Licence, check out the info available online; these will help you learn to find the a Personal License!

Article Keywords:
Personal Licence, Personal License

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!