Article published on February 11th 2012 | Career

Today there are many different choices when a person is trying to find work. When one is self employed there are many choices as well as many sources of frustration. Creating a skills profile when you post your services is a great way to boost your attractiveness to clients who are searching for the products or services that you are offering.

Through creating a skills profile, the self employed people can quickly find work in the areas where they have special abilities and talents. A self employed person who may be just getting started is not likely to be well known. As a result it can be difficult for them to find work. By creating a skills profile when advertising, they find more customers request quotes and services.

When an individual who is self employed is actually established, they might find that they need to find work in addition to what they already have in order to increase their profit margins. By creating a skills profile they can tell people about themselves and their business quickly and easily. This allows customers to research background information as well as any reviews that may be available.

It is most cost effective for a self employed individual to create a free account where they can advertise their services and create a skill profile to help them find work. There may be many different choices that they make when they begin advertising in this way. ProfileTree allows anyone who has a service to promote or who might be looking for a service to create a free skills profile on their platform.

When creating your skills profile you want to list your services and products and make sure you are accurately describing your offer. If you specialize in tutoring for example, your skills profile should list the tutoring services that you offer precisely. Saying for example that you specialize in math isnâ€™t a clear proposition. You should state your levels clearly. If you are excellent in algebra, then your profile should say that.

For a person who is self employed, the methods used to find work might differ based on the industry. A cleaner for example might need to post their skills in a variety of categories while a writer might only need to list their skills in one area. A self employed individual has the ability to find work in many different ways today.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/career-articles/create-a-skills-profile-to-find-work-for-the-self-employed.htm - Article Side

ProfileTree - About Author:
Whether you are searching for local supplies of products or services or need something done quickly, you will find it can be very frustrating to search online. Many of the smaller organizations may advertise online but do not have their own websites, making it very difficult for a person to gain the needed information. At ProfileTree, a free service is available for people who are looking for services as well as those who are offering services. By creating a central location for people to come together and fill their needs, ProfileTree can help businesses expand and grow while helping consumers find whatever it is that they need such as a find work. Visit today at www.ProfileTree.com for more information and to get your free account.

Article Keywords:
find work, self employed, skills profile

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!