Government is investing in the economy like never before and its presence can be felt in almost all the sectors of the economy be it finance, Railways, Power, Communication and Airlines. The government companies are doing great and earning huge profits there contributing in the phenomenal growth process that India has been witness to. The growth rate of over eight percent per annum would not have been possible with the help of only private enterprises. No wonder more and people are looking out for jobs in the public sector.

The best thing about Government Jobs in India is the security that the job offers to the employees. Instability in the economy and recession do affect the status of any personâ€™s job. This enhances the trust of an employee and he is encouraged to work harder as compared to a private company which offers little or no job security. Plus the recent hike in the salaries of the government employees on the recommendation of the sixth Pay Commission has further generated much interest among the youth and also provided the necessary impetus to the government services.

Banking sector in India has registered a tremendous growth and was not at all affected by the global economic crisis of 2007-2008. It speaks volumes about the strong structure of public banks in India. The performance of the banks in India has been robust and no doubt the youth of today finds Bank Jobs so attractive. Bank Jobs in India have seen an upward slope in recent years due to the expansion of the banking system and opening of new branches every other day. Banks have reached the remotest corners of the country and the bank jobs have also subsequently multiplied.

Public sector banks recruit candidates through a written test the notification for the same is issued by various banks from time to time. The interested candidates can fill the form and give the examination which consists of some basic questions on mathematics, English, reasoning and general awareness. The selected candidates are then called for an interview and if the interview stage is cleared then the candidate secures a job in the bank. Private Banks on the other hand recruit candidates from college campuses or through a simple interview process.

Bank Jobs are a good career option for the candidates who are good in understanding financial matters and handling money. It focuses on maintaining good relations with the customers and honesty in dealings. Though a commerce background helps a student in working in a bank, but a student with science or arts background can do as well as a commerce student. Also it offers job security like all other government jobs in India. The working time is fixed and the employee is showered with many perks along with excellent salary. Thus if you are looking for Bank jobs in India then think no further as working in the banks and specially public sector banks is a sure shot way to have a bright future ahead of you.
