Sia training - apply for a license by Julia Bennet

Article published on January 6th 2012 | Career

People who want to operate in the private security industry are required to hold a sia licence, pursuant to the Private Security Industry Act. If you want to apply for a license of this type, must take at least 30 hours of class room based sia training courses first.

If you need a sia licence for working in one of the specific sectors of the private security industry, you may want to consider taking some sia training courses before applying for it. This way, you will have the possibility of developing all the competencies required for obtaining a recognized qualification prior to applying for the licence.

The sia licence is basically a permit issued by the Security Industry Authority (SIA), the body in charge of regulating the private security industry on the territory of the United Kingdom, which certifies the fact that the individual who has such a sia licence is authorized to work in the following fields: vehicle immobilization, key holding and manned guarding, with subfields such as cash and valuables in transit, close protection, door supervision, public space surveillance and security guarding.

In addition, all individuals who work in the private security industry are bound to have a sia licence, according to the Private Security Industry Act 2001. If you want to apply for a sia licence and do not know how to proceed, you could ask for the help of one of the companies that specializes in sia training courses and licence applications. This way, you will be able to make sure that you acquire all the competencies required for successfully performing your job in the private security industry. Another important thing that you should know is that the sia licences are of two types, respectively front line licence and non-front line licence, and that the former is mandatory for all persons that undertake licensable activities, whereas the latter is required for those who manage individuals who engage in licensable activities.

The sia training courses offered by companies specialized in providing this type of services usually focus on the specific skills necessary for obtaining a licence. Thus, the sia training courses conducted by certified organizations should include modules with emphasis on: awareness of the law in the private sector industry, health and safety for the private security operative, emergency procedures, development of communication skills and customer care. By taking sia training courses, individuals become ready for operating in the private security industry in a satisfactory and secure manner.

If you are thinking about taking some sia training courses before applying for the license, you can start by searching on the Internet and seeing what type of sia courses are available on the market, what their rates are, how long they take, on what specific competencies they focus. Once you have found a course that meets all your training needs and that focuses both on the theoretical and on the practical knowledge that trainees should acquire before taking the exam, you can go ahead and sign up for it; this way, you will make sure that your application for a sia licence will be successful.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/career-articles/sia-training-apply-for-a-license.htm - Article Side

Julia Bennet - About Author:
Sign up for our professional and comprehensive a sia training courses tailored to meet the specific needs of each customer before applying for a a sia licence and we guarantee that, upon the completion of our training module, you will be more than ready to take the exam!

Article Keywords:
sia licence,sia training

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!