Understand Canadian Immigration Formalities to Get Employed in the True North by Julia Bennet

Article published on August 20th 2012 | Career

If you have got a job offer from a Canadian company and you are mentally prepared to fly, you need to know the Canadian immigration procedure to get a work permit. On the other hand, your new company may require you to complete these immigration formalities for finally conferring you the appointment letter to you. Work visas are different from the immigration visas and you should check with the Canadian embassy in your city or state whether you are eligible for an immigration visa or a work visa. Alternatively, you can get in touch with an immigration consultancy to know more about the formalities and your eligibility as well. There are several immigration consultancies that are helping people to get closer to the jobs in Canada.

You need to first determine whether you require a general passport or a migrant visa. Please note that the Canadian immigration rules have become very stringent after the 9/11 attack in NY. It is best to get a passport beforehand and submit required application to the competent departments and offices. What are the common document requisites for getting a Canada work visa? Well, the job offer letter from the company in which you have been selected. You should also gather a labor market opinion and a proof of your previous work experience and also a passport and a proof of nationality. For applying for jobs in Canada, you need to submit a medical test report and criminal background verification report as well.

Contact your local Canadian immigration office to get a work permit application form and other pertinent forms. You will also get relevant information about documents that have to be submitted and all. Know about the processing fees and other fees from the counselors. Keep in mind that the processing fees vary depending on the type of visa you are looking for. Note that incomplete applications are summarily rejected hence you should be utmost careful when filling up the forms and other sorts of documents. However, you can get rid of these hassles if you simply contact an immigration consultancy that can guide you all through the procedure of applying for work visa and other immigration formalities. This way, you can easily materialize your dream of doing jobs in Canada.

What particulars you have to mention when you visit a Canadian immigration consultancy to assess your eligibility for immigrating to the True North Strong and Free. You have to clearly state your residential address, your name as it appears on the passport, your daytime phone number and cell number and most importantly, why you want to migrate to Canada. Truly speaking, many people fail to answer this question properly and their applications get rejected. This is because many people just casually want to visit the country and cannot put forward a good reason. But if you have already started applying for jobs in Canada and you think you will get an offer from any of those Canadian companies, itâ€™s wise to contact a consultancy as early as possible to get the work visa much before the company asks you whether you have one.
